Fresno Unified kicks off its second year of Saturday Academy, allowing students additional time to deepen their connections with peers, teachers and their school. This program successfully launched last school year at sites within the Hoover High School and Fresno High School regions, with nearly 10,000 students from transitional kindergarten through high school participating. Beginning Saturday, the program expands to 70 school sites, touching all regions of the district. In addition to math, language arts and hands-on science projects, students will have opportunities to participate in the arts and other activities.

“Saturday Academy is a great way for our students to spend more time learning, whether its math, science or art. We look forward to the second year of this successful initiative,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
Media can capture some of the Saturday Academy action by visiting Heaton Elementary this Saturday.
