Roosevelt School of the Arts Dance Department presents its first dance concert of the school year. All students currently enrolled in a Roosevelt School of the Arts (RSA) dance class were invited to choreograph their own pieces for the performance. Dance styles include ballet, jazz, tap, hip-hop, contemporary, modern, folklorico and Hmong. Students designed and set lighting, edited music and selected costumes under the guidance of RSA staff, led by dance director Saima Nunez. Tickets are $5. Proceeds will go toward dance shoes, attire, costumes and workshops.
“From the choreography to the lighting to the costumes, this an entirely student-run performance that encourages RSA students to become experts at all aspects of putting on a dance concert,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
