Fremont Elementary School is helping provide its families with healthy non-perishable food through a new partnership with the Central California Food Bank. The last food distribution before the winter break is Dec. 14, with student council officers and class representatives bagging the food on Dec. 13. Students and staff will distribute bags of food based on the number of individuals in a household. The food items were delivered to the school thanks to a grant sponsorship from the Central California Food Bank. This will be the school’s third food distribution.

“Through partnerships with the Central California Food Bank, our schools are able to distribute food within our school communities, helping our students and their families put food on the table. Helping organize food and distribute the items is also a great way for our students to learn about serving others,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
