Students from health career pathways at Fresno Unified high schools will participate in a “Day at the Hospital.” The 24 students will learn about careers and opportunities in the health sector. They will be given scrubs to wear and keep.

The event is hosted by the district’s College and Career Readiness Department in partnership with the leadership team at Community Regional Medical Center and the Hospital Council of Northern and Central California, which supports empowering hospitals to act together on issues affecting patient care and the health status of communities.

“We are grateful for our partners in the health industry and their willingness to help our students explore careers in the medical field and work toward being college and career ready graduates,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
