Joe Del Bosque, a central San Joaquin Valley farmer and member of the California Water Commission, will kick off the Fresno High Theory of Knowledge Lecture Series. Del Bosque will speak on local and state water issues. Throughout the school year, Fresno High’s International Baccalaureate Programme will host a series of lectures featuring speakers who will challenge commonly held assumptions about the world. The lectures are for students and the community.

“The lecture series hosted by Fresno High’s IB program broadens knowledge, not only for our students, but is an opportunity to invite the community to the campus to learn and make connections with our students and staff,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
