MEDIA ADVISORY

Bullard High School Celebrates Black History Month

What: Bullard students and staff will join with the local community to celebrate Black History Month

When: Wednesday, Feb. 13, 2019
9-10 a.m.

Where: Bullard High School lecture hall
5445 N. Palm Ave. (93711)

Bullard High School’s Black Student Union will host a Black History Month celebration with student speeches, guest speakers and information about higher education during a morning program on campus. Students will learn about the significance of Black History Month, as well as information about historically black colleges and universities and University of California opportunities for minorities.

“Black History Month gives us an opportunity to learn more about the tremendous contributions by African Americans, and to celebrate their influence in our country. Bullard has established a tradition of highlighting student voice and providing critical information about colleges and universities as it celebrates Black History Month,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
