Recent Arts Investment Provides Roosevelt High School Students with 25 New Electronic Pianos

Over spring break, 25 new Yamaha electronic pianos were delivered to Roosevelt High School, replacing the original instruments built in 1983 – the first electronic models ever made. The purchase is especially exciting for the approximately 60 students taking piano instruction at Roosevelt High School of the Arts. School administration worked with Fresno Piano Gallery to purchase the new pianos and ensure their delivery prior to the end of the school year.

“Roosevelt High School has long been known for its commitment to advancing arts education, producing some of our best local and nationally acclaimed talent. These new electronic pianos reinforce the importance music plays in a student’s overall development and provides generations of students to come the opportunity to learn a musical instrument,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
