McLane High School’s ArtVenture Academy will share its yearlong project at ArtHop, “After Dark: Breaking the Chains of Human Trafficking.” The show will feature student visual art, including Fresno After Dark oil paintings, graphic novel paintings (an expose on Parkway Drive), pop-ups with stories on sex and labor trafficking survivors, shadow boxes and sculpture.

The show will also feature After Dark Dancers and After Dark monologues, dramatizations and spoken word.

“This newest project by McLane ArtVenture explores human trafficking, an issue of vital importance in our community. Once again, students are using visual and performing arts to explore relevant issues and become better citizens and future leaders,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
