After a highly successful pilot program last summer, the district’s Office of African American Academic Acceleration will offer an expanded Summer Literacy Program beginning June 11. The five-week elementary program for kindergarten through fourth grade and the three-week middle school program will focus on improving reading skills and engaging parents to reinforce the importance of reading at home. About 630 students from throughout the district are expected to attend. For more information on being part of the program, please email Alysapalmasummer@gmail.com.
The district will partner again with Springboard Collaborative in offering a high quality, research driven program that boosts reading skills and prevents the loss of learning over the summer.

“After seeing tremendous reading gains for our students who participated in the Summer Literacy Program last year, we are excited to be able to offer this intensive learning to combat the “summer slide” to even more students this year,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
