Ninth and 10th grade students from Duncan Polytechnical High School will participate in the campus’ annual Portfolio Day. Students will take part in mock interviews with more than 80 community volunteers. Students will share their digital portfolios, which showcase their academic and CTE work. They will have the opportunity to highlight the “soft skills” they have learned, including communication, problem-solving, and collaboration. The community partners provide the students with feedback on their work and interviewing skills.

Duncan is unique in that it provides students with four years of interviewing and professional skills development, including preparing a resume, applying for a job and organizing a portfolio to present to a prospective employer. Portfolio Day is a centerpiece of the school’s efforts to prepare college and career ready graduates.
“Our students gain invaluable experience on Portfolio Day through real-world feedback during mock interviews. We appreciate the support of our community volunteers who take the time to help prepare our students for future success,” said Superintendent Bob Nelson.
